The proposed link will only slightly reduce the existing available parking and turning space. There were a number of cars and vans parked in the yard area when I visited the site but still some space free. The yard is down a private access road with little opportunity for on street parking and is within easy walking distance of public car parks should all the spaces within the site be occupied.

It must have slipped through the net. Thanks.

So are you happy that they have enough parking provision within the site?
