Hi Adrian,

Further to our meeting and my earlier email, I wanted to confirm that from the information that we have at present, I see no real benefit in heritage terms of retaining the extant façade to Lower Abbott House, or to rebuilding a facsimile of the façade, and rebuilding the rear in a more modern style. The style of the extant (altered) façade is not either particularly typical of the locality or so unusual as to stand out within the settlement. Of course this would need reconsideration if it could be shown that early architectural elements do survive and could be retained.

Instead I would probably recommend that a new, quality, modern building be designed and built, using an appropriate palette of locally-traditional materials.

Yours,

Peter Iles
